

WHAT'S MY VOCAL RANGE ?

While everyone's range is specific to their voice, most vocal ranges are categorized within 6 common voice types: Bass, Baritone, Tenor, Alto, Mezzo-Soprano, and Soprano. If you've been part of a choir before, you're probably pretty familiar with these ranges. If you haven't, you may have wondered which voice "type" fits you.

Generally speaking, your vocal range is the lowest note you can sing to the highest note you can sing. You may be able to reach notes within more than one vocal range, but when it comes to making a decision, comfort is key. Where is your voice most comfortable? Where do the notes stop sounding great even though you can still squeak them out?

Take a look at this full, 88-key keyboard diagram below. Each C, starting with the lowest C on the keyboard (three keys up from the bottom), is assigned a number. The lowest C is C1, up through the highest, at C8. Middle C is C4.

The vast majority of vocal ranges fall somewhere between C2 and F6 (the F above the high soprano C6):

Check out the diagram above. It often surprises people to discover how much overlap there is between vocal ranges. In fact, look at the four notes around middle C (A3, B3, C4, D4). Those four notes are a part of every single voice type, whether low or high.

Now, the voice ranges above may not be exactly true for all voices. Your voice might be lower or higher than the ranges listed. This is merely a rough sketch of where many voices tend to fall.

Here's a list of some example ranges, and how they're written:

Bass: E2–D4

Baritone: F2–G4

Alto: E3–G5

Mezzo-Soprano: E3–B $\flat$ 5

Soprano: G3–C6
